

Detroit Links: Paul Krugman explains how saving GM didn't kill capitalism, a local tech firm encourages outsourcing and 'suave senior' sues

Published: Friday, May 20, 2011, 1:44 PM Updated: Friday, May 20, 2011, 1:52 PM

By Jonathan Oosting | MLive.com

Paul Krugman wants you to know that people still make things in America. The New York Times columnist published an op-ed Thursday detailing the surprising resurgence of domestic manufacturing, long written off by many flat-earthers as the latest conquest of Communist China. In particular, Krugman credited the Obama administration for stepping in to save General Motors and Chrysler, a move one conservative lawmaker called "a war on capitalism." [NYT]

As Chrysler looks to trademark its "Imported from Detroit" tagline, another local business is pushing a new slogan:

"Outsource to Detroit." GalaxE.Solutions, a tech company that recently set up shop on "Webward" Avenue, is encouraging other companies to consider outsourcing IT work to Detroit rather than going offshore. You can get an "Outsource" t-shirt, designed by Detroit Manufacturing, for any donation of $10 or more to Goodwill Industries. [GWD]

Goodwill Industries | GalaxE.Solutions

http://www.mlive.com/news/detroit/index.ssf/2011/05/detroit_links_paul_krugman_exp.html