GalaxE.Solutions Inc., an informational technology services company with a growing Detroit presence, is one of more than a dozen companies invited Wednesday to an Insourcing American jobs forum at the White House.

Tim Bryan, chairman and CEO of the New Jersey-based firm, has been invited to the forum, hosted by President Barack Obama and Vice President Joe Biden. Large and small businesses that are insourcing jobs in the U.S. and boosting investments in the country will attend the forum, according to a White House news release.

GalaxE.Solutions' "Outsource to Detroit" campaign, which included the hanging of a 10-story banner from a Woodward Avenue building last fall, was billed a "model for repatriating jobs back to the United States," in the White House news release.

Bryan previously has met with Obama administration about "Outsource to Detroit," which provides low-cost and high-quality workers as an alternative to outsourcing IT workers overseas.

GalaxE.Solutions opened a Detroit office in April 2010 and has hired 150 workers, on its way to a goal of hiring 500 workers, according to the release. The firm in 2010 received a five-year, $4.6 million state tax break to hire 500 workers by 2015.
