

GalaxE.Solutions CEO Tim Bryan meets with U.S. Senators for job creation roundtable, highlights “Outsource to Detroit”

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 3, 2012 — GalaxE.Solutions Chairman and CEO Tim Bryan met with job creators and U.S. Senators yesterday, including Debbie Stabenow, co-chair of the Senate Manufacturing Caucus, at a national job creation roundtable in Washington, D.C. Bryan, together with select companies from around the country, discussed efforts to create and repatriate jobs to the U.S.

Said Senator Stabenow: “Michigan businesses and entrepreneurs are leading the nation in clean energy patents, advanced battery production and other high-tech industries helping to transform our economy to create new jobs. It’s only fitting that Michigan business leaders had a seat at today’s national roundtable on job creation. I was pleased to host Tim and others who discussed how public-private partnerships are creating new jobs and shared ideas for how to support American businesses.”

“As the demand for increasingly complex IT services grows, offshore-based IT firms are challenged in providing quality, innovation and other efficiencies,” said Bryan. “This represents a tremendous opportunity to bring IT jobs back to the U.S. through programs such as ‘Outsource to Detroit.’”

The Outsource to Detroit campaign focuses on creating a healthcare IT hub in Downtown Detroit with a model that offers an alternative to work going offshore. GalaxE has already hired more than 150 IT professionals with more than 200 immediate openings – a sign that the “Outsource to Detroit” model is successful and growing with companies nationwide.
